You can just start building. Let's see what it's going to turn into. Many things emerge: towers, houses, walls, bridges, furniture, perhaps a giant game of dominos, or even just a colourfully built structure which reveals its meaning only in the imagination of the child.

With the Buntbox Colour Bricks, the child's creativity can run free. While playing, the child has the choice of how they want to use the blocks. This building block can be a building block, while at the same time it can represent a car, an airplane, a character, an animal, etc.

Modifying a plan if you realise it's unworkable has a lot to do with creativity.

Buntbox Colour Bricks make it possible for the child to change something in the construction method if he notices that the chosen way is not the right one.

The Buntbox Colour Bricks awaken in us the desire to be creative.

The simple question arises: how can I bring what I have in mind into reality with the available building blocks?
